

SALT TRADESWOMEN AUSTRALIA CONFERENCE

Wollongong Town Hall, Crown & Kembla Streets, Wollongong
NSW 2500

Thursday 11th August 6pm to 9:30pm and

Friday 12th August 8:30am to 4:30pm 2016

This is a unique opportunity to meet other tradeswomen, apprentices, policy makers, companies, suppliers and organisations that all have the same purpose; to support women in trades.

Thursday night is the launch of the conference and exhibition by the NSW Minister for Women the Hon Pru Goward.

The exhibition will honour the work of the women who worked in trades during the Second World War and honouree presentations to a small number of women and their families will be made to acknowledge the work done by over 20,000 women during that time. The exhibition will showcase the women and their trade work from early times to current. It will also commence the SALT Women of War commemorative project working with schools, local historical museums and organisations to place plaques in places where the women worked across Australia.

Friday will see the coming together of tradeswomen from across Australia and overseas to look at what has been done to support them. SALT initiatives are currently unique in the world and the conference aims to continue this work by generate a new and exciting way forward. This is an opportunity for tradeswomen and interested organisations to work together, create new and original concepts backed by tangible action plans. The conference will also showcase suppliers to women in the trades and provide a wonderful opportunity for face to face networking.
